

How to create prosperity

Do not judge the day by what you reap, but by what you sow. What you put out is what you get back. If you give people more than what they paid for, you will soon be getting paid for more than what you gave. Those who are always looking to get money are beggars. Those who are always looking to give/invest money are millionaires.

Consider the abundance and prosperity of life, the universe and everything. You are surrounded by the ever-flowing abundance that the Universe provides. An abundance of stars. An abundance of trees. An abundance of people. An abundance of objects. An abundance of everything. Rather than habitually looking at what is lacking, what is missing, what is not there, appreciate what is there, what you already own, what you already have, what you have already experienced. Talk about it. Bless it. List it. Picture it. Immerse yourself in the abundance already available. This will shift your energy-field to attract more of it.

Your imagination is magnetic. Train your imagination to spend extremely large amounts of money. For example, write down the things you would purchase and do if you had Billions of Dollars. Do this more than once. It will shift your energy-field to attract more that which you have your attention on.

Do not focus on the money itself, but on what you really want. You are not really interested in and excited about money itself – numbers on a screen or paper bills – you are interested in what you can have, do and feel with the money. Pay special attention to how you would feel if you already had all the money you want. If you can coax yourself into feeling as if you already had the money and behave a little bit as if you already had everything you want, you will start attracting more of it. Once you feel rich and no longer need money, no longer allow money or your bank account or bills to dictate your emotions, you have mastered the issue and everything you need will flow into your life effortlessly.

Do not work “in order to get money”; work for the joy of it. Find work or aspects of your work that you enjoy and increase the time spent on these while reducing activity that you do not like. Doing things that you do not like will weaken your energy-field and ultimately lead to less money. Doing work that is no fun and very hard, never leads to more money – despite what society has taught you. Do make “feeling well” your top priority...not money.

Investigate avenues of passive income – things that make money for you. Examples: My books make money for me, without me having to put in any extra work. My neighbour's fully automatic video-store makes money for him while he is sitting at home. My father's tenants who are paying rent for his real estate are making money for him. Think about it.

Spend some time in the energy-field of money, surrounded by people who have money, at places that are pleasant and beautiful. You have to reside in the energy-field of money in order to attract it.
